

SRY Wilderness Adventure

Get ready for the adventure of a lifetime! Shoulder your packs, tie up your boots, and come explore one of the greatest wilderness areas east of the Rocky Mountains. You'll get to see the wild in a way most have never done - on foot and completely self reliant using only what you can carry in your pack. You'll be backpacking over 70km through the Blow-me-down mountains and into the impressive Lewis Hills. There are no trails or signs, you'll learn how to navigate using map and compass and GPS . You'll camp surrounded by thousand foot high canyon walls and you'll stand on the highest peak of Newfoundland's Island gaining a 360 degree view that stretches for over a hundred kilometers! You're guaranteed to see wildlife. Expect to see moose, caribou, arctic hare, eagles, and if you're lucky some black bears!

You'll begin learning the basics before we set foot in the wilderness: how to pack your backpack, how to set up a tent, how to light a stove, and how to stay warm. Once we get under way you'll learn to master various backcountry skills both as an individual and with your group. By the end of the adventure you'll have learned much of what is needed to travel the backcountry safely and without impact on the environment.

During this adventure in the wilderness, without the modern comforts of home, you will not only learn a great deal about backpacking skills, the ecosystem, and mountain weather, you'll learn about yourself and the amazing things you can achieve. You'll also have time to reflect on God's creation and power as you experience it in a unique and life changing way.
